

Eldoret District Hospital (200 beds)

Amisha Jhalotra
Kenya, Africa

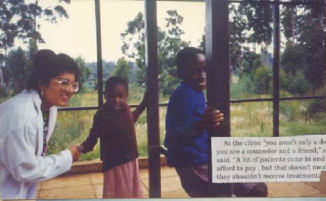

Public Health:

Although Eldoret is very close to the Equator, its

"I think Americans have a terrible notion of the medical care in Africa. The doctors are very skilled. The problem is they don't have the facilities, the equipment and the technology."

"At the time 'you aren't only a doctor, you are a counselor and a friend.' She said: 'A lot of patients come in and can't afford to pay, but that doesn't mean they shouldn't receive treatment.'"

Disaster-ready: Kenyans have been described as being "disaster-ready" because they are all "Kisumu" all the time.

