Here I am spending some of my free time with the kids of the village. After a tough day in Sunday School, they were always full of energy and ready to play!

Here is Leslie working on her Swahali with some of the villagers. This helped in her interaction with patients while dispensing medicine at the clinics.

Look at all the Flamingos!!

Here is Sister Elizabeth, the head of the Catholic Mission and the main nurse. Her devotion to the service of others was an inspiration to me. She had a big part in making my Summer of Service a unique learning experience.

On Sundays after mass we were able to spend some time with the children of Marigot. Many of them spoke English and all were curious and friendly. During the week we were kept busy with the mobile clinic run by the nuns. John was the driver and during the clinics he weighed babies and gathered information from the patients. I spent most of my time filling prescriptions for the 80 to 100 people who came to the clinics each day.

This is a school run by the nuns. Schools were happy places in Kenya and at this particular school singing was a large part of the children's day. The sisters were a wonderful influence on the lives of these children, as they were for John and myself.

This is Musa, the lab tech., working at one of the clinics. Fees at the clinic were kept very low, but only a few could afford the basic lab tests offered.
