← Santos is a bright, cheerful little boy, who is quadriplegic. Here, I am with Santos and some of his friends. Santos loved playing cards, coloring and playing memory games. His patience, determination and huge smile will always be in my memory.

→ Staying inside Santos's house on a RAINY day. Coloring, drawing and playing CARDS kept us all busy!

← The village of Montoya was the site of a large children's program. Up to 100 children would come to the church to color, play games and make crafts. Here I am with some of the regular participants! The time I spent with the children of Montoya are among my best memories of Mexico.

Mornings were often spent at the nursing home, coloring, singing songs, and most importantly, just visiting with the people who lived there. José was one of my favorite people to talk to. He enjoyed talking - and also trying on my sunglasses!
