

The Franciscan Center for Catholic Studies and
The Department of Environmental Studies and Sciences welcomes

Dr. Cynthia Moe-Lobeda

Hope, Courage, and Moral-Spiritual Power in the Age of Climate Colonialism

Thursday, April 11, 2019

4:15PM-5:45PM

Key Auditorium - Roger Bacon Hall 202

Dr. Cynthia Moe-Lobeda is Professor of Christian Ethics at Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary, Church Divinity School of the Pacific, and the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley. She has devoted her professional life to addressing climate justice and climate racism, globalization, economic justice, eco-feminist theology, moral agency, and faith-based resistance to systemic oppression. Her book, Resisting Structural Evil: Love as Ecological-Economic Vocation (Fortress, 2013), won a Nautilus Award for social justice. She has authored or co-authored numerous books, including, The Bible and Ethics: A New Conversation (Fortress Press, 2018); Saint Francis and the Foolishness of God (Orbis, 1993, 2015); Public Church: For the Life of the World (Fortress, 2004); and Healing a Broken World: Globalization and God (Fortress, 2002). A dynamic, thoughtful speaker, she has lectured or consulted in Africa, Asia, Australia, Europe, Latin America, and North America.

