

The Franciscan Center for Catholic Studies

welcomes

Stephen J. Pope

Professor of Theology at Boston College

Stephen J. Pope is a Professor in the Department of Theology at Boston College, where he teaches courses on social justice, the virtues, and the intersection of science and theology. He received his BA in philosophy from Gonzaga University and his MA and Ph.D. in theological ethics from the University of Chicago. His publications include Human Evolution and Christian Ethics (Cambridge University Press, 2007), and A Step Along the Way: Models of Christian Service (Orbis, 2015). He has worked for eight years as a volunteer for Catholic chaplaincies in several Massachusetts prisons, and presented in a variety of workshops focused on the contribution of faith communities to restorative justice and political reconciliation for Catholic Relief Services and the Jesuit Refugee Service.

“Prophetic Citizenship”

Topics Addressed:

What roles did Catholic voters play in the presidential election?

What roles should they play now that Donald J. Trump has been elected?

Monday, February 27, 2017

4:30PM-6:00PM

The Boland Room - Fr. Benjamin Kuhn Alumni House

For more information contact:
W. T. (Tom) Dickens, Ph.D.
Professor, Religious Studies
Director, Franciscan Center for Catholic Studies
wtdickens@siena.edu

